Do I need mouse drivers?

Updated: 01/24/2018 by Computer Hope

Drivers

Today's operating systems no longer require drivers for standard mouse interoperability. If your computer has a standard one or two button mouse and uses a current version of the operating system, you don't need any special drivers to use your mouse.

- How to get the mouse to work in MS-DOS.

- If you have a mouse that is not working, see the mouse and touchpad help and support page for additional troubleshooting steps in finding out the problem.

Software

Some pointing devices have special hardware features (extra buttons or a trackball, for instance). To make use of these features, download the drivers for your device, and any required software, from the website of the device manufacturer.

Installation

© 2020 Computer Hope