"COOLING-OFF" PERIOD
DOES NOT APPLY TO DEALERSHIPS

The Federal Trade Commission's "Cooling-Off" Rule, allowing a period of three days during which time a consumer may cancel a purchase, does not apply to the purchase of an automobile at a dealership.

The "cooling-off" period relates only to home solicitation sales or sales which occur in a location other than the seller's regular place of business.

By coming to the dealership, the customer has initiated the sale and is bound by the signed documents which complete the sale. The customer may not return the vehicle for a refund simply because he/she has changed his/her mind.
